"Victory for Germany will mean eventual annexation of Canada by the United States," Senator Beaubien told a Montreal service club in a recent address. Quoting an outstanding economist, the Conservative senator said that this country is balancing between the economic force of America and the political force of Great Britain. "What," he asked, "could prevent the economic force from operating freely if the political lien disappeared?"

Proved His Ability

Young Deckhand Captained Lifeboat For Week After Freighter Sank

Executive ability and a notable feat of seamanship displayed by an 18-year-old deckboy after his ship had been torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic attracted the attention of the British Admiralty, which has invited him to call for an interview.

The boy, named Morrison, member of a family of fishers on the Hebrides Island of Lewis, was in a water-logged lifeboat with five other survivors of the steamship Arlington Castle. He found that he was the only one among them who knew how to handle a sail, or anything about navigation, so he calmly took charge.

With a small compass he set a course, and for a week never left the tiller except to take a turn at the oars to warm himself, although his hands were badly frostbitten.

There were plenty of biscuits, condensed milk and some bully beef in the locker, but very little water, so Morrison rationed this, allowing only one spoonful at a time, except in the case of a 65-year-old man, to whom he gave a drink whenever he needed it.

The boat on the seventh day was sighted by a Norwegian tanker, which took the castaways aboard.

Another Economy Measure

German Housewives Use Shopping Basket To Save Wrapping Paper

German housewives have brought out the old-fashioned shopping baskets to help win the war.

An almost forgotten relic in most German households, the shopping basket has now become a treasured auxiliary to the Hausfrau because grocers and butchers are unable to deliver goods to the homes and—more important—because it saves wrapping paper and paper bags.

The basket enjoys the benediction of authorities who publicly have told German women to use it in shopping. It is pointed out that potatoes, for instance, can be dumped right into the basket, as can other vegetables, canned goods, standardized soap and other such commodities. Some stores have taken the hint of the Government and are now displaying signs asking shoppers to bring their old baskets with them.

This is one of many German wartime economy measures. Another is bone-collecting, which has become a high patriotic duty.

The official German news agency, DNB, has circulated this admonition: "Housewives, don't burn any bones and don't throw them into the garbage can." Bones should be put aside, even when they have been used for soups, and kept in readiness for school children, the Hitler Youth and other voluntary bone collectors, the authorities say.

Bones thus collected can be put to three uses: For the manufacture of mullage, for industrial fats and for fertilizers.

The fats contained in bones, it is said, is valuable to soap and cosmetics manufacturers because being usable in other branches of industry.

Experts estimate that three-fourths of the bones in Germany go to waste. That condition, it is insisted must cease.

Cheers Were Silenced

When Widow Of Exeter's Commander Received Medal From King George

A woman dressed in black hushed the cheering which swept Whitehall recently when the King and his people honored the officers and men of the cruisers Exeter and Ajax for their bravery in the victory of the Graf Spee. It was on the historic Horse Guards' parade ground. The King had just inspected the 700 officers and men of the two cruisers. In one corner, watching the inspection, was a small group of civilians, the next-of-kin of those who had been killed in the battle. Then from this group Mrs. Russell, widow of Major W. A. Russell, of H.M.S. Exeter, who died of his wounds, was conducted to the investiture table to receive the medal for conspicuous gallantry from the King. Marine Russell had both arms shattered when the Exeter received a direct hit from an 11-inch shell, but he remained on deck to cheer his shipmates throughout the battle. The crowd had been cheering its loudest until this moment. But this pale woman in black seemed to symbolize all the national sentiment of grief epitomized by the Cenotaph, not many yards away. The cheers died away and there was silence, as on another Remembrance Day. The King shook hands with Mrs. Russell. The Queen smiled her sympathy.

Loyalty Of South Africa

Prime Minister Jan Smuts Stands By Ideals Of British Freedom

Prime Minister Jan Smuts said that he advocated South Africa's joining in the Empire's war against Germany because "Great Britain is our greatest friend and . . . Germany would be a dangerous bedfellow."

"I am not an Englishman—I have not a drop of English blood in me. I do not for a moment hesitate to choose to stand by old friendships and old ideals of freedom and justice for what we stand. I do believe that Great Britain is our greatest friend and that Germany would be a dangerous bedfellow."

"Many people in the Union are constantly recalling the past. I remember that it was Great Britain which made South Africa a free country and which has given liberally and lavishly whatever South Africa has asked for in the way of liberty and status."

"Since Sept. 4 there has been a surge of feeling in favor of South Africa's decision to enter the war. It has been a great consolation for me to find this response from all over the Union. Support for the United party is winning because the party's cause is a winning one."

More than 41 per cent of the men's clothing manufactured in the United States is made in New York city.

All In Day's Work

Shippers of east coast fishing vessels recently, when William W. Pacy, 25, master of the "Courage," went ashore at Scarborough, Eng., after being bombed by a German Heinkel, he merely phoned his wife he was safe, then put to sea again.

Snails, because of their ability to undergo long fasts, are taken along on safaris by African natives as a source of fresh food.

According to manufacturers, the life of a good tire is about 20,000 miles.

Canada's Opportunities

Provided the people of this country, and of all sections of it, are ready and willing to pull together with the single objective in view of making the most of the opportunities that are being afforded, Canada's future destiny as one of the most powerful and influential nations of the world appears assured.

That the future holds out glittering prospects of great potentialities for this Dominion there can be no doubt if the foundations which are now being laid are built on the solid rock of true democratic principles and if the people of this young nation bind themselves together in unified effort to seize upon the opportunities that lie on the threshold.

The testimony of men of experience, wisdom and vision that Canada is destined for a great role among the nations is being multiplied daily. This country has all the ingredients of powerful nationhood: an immense area, an invigorating and healthful climate, vast spaces capable of enormous development and now, the opportunity for stretching out and developing these great assets. All that is needed is a populace prepared to look ahead and assume the place in the sun that merely awaits the grasping.

As the octogenarian Sir Alfred Morton, former acting prime minister of Newfoundland recently said, urging union of Newfoundland with this country: "Obviously it (Canada) is to be the heart of the British Empire in the not distant future. We have the greatest country in the world. All that we now want is the greatest people in character and in courage."

A Great Mission

Stating that after the war the world will be initially an Anglo-Saxon dominated world, Frederick T. Burchall, Ottawa correspondent of the New York Times, recently visualized a great role for this country in a world purged of Hitlerism. Declaring that this country has already become the geographical centre of the British Empire, Mr. Burchall saw prospects of Canada becoming the world's air centre through the British Commonwealth Air Training scheme.

"It may be Canada's highest mission," said Mr. Burchall, "to bring us all together—the democracies of the old world and the democracies of the new, to be the keystone of Anglo-Saxondom, holding together a great arch of peace and progress, topped by the ancient culture of France."

A brilliant vision and by no means an impractical one. Indeed, our feet are already planted on the broad highway to the goal conjured up by the New York newspaperman. It remains for us to see that the road is traversed without deviation until the objective is reached. It cannot be achieved, however, until the war has been won. Hence the importance of bending every energy to the first task immediately at hand, that of defeating the enemy thoroughly and speedily. The sooner that milestone has been passed, the earlier will Canada, the British Empire and the other democracies be able to get down to an ambitious program of peace, progress and prosperity—security for themselves and security for others.

And what of the war itself? Despite those who were disposed to be impatient and irritable at the lack of any spectacular drive on the part of either of the belligerents, British authorities were well satisfied that progress was made in the first six months of hostilities. As Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer of Great Britain well summarized it: "It has been of great advantage to us to have these six months in which we have been able so vastly to improve our preparation and equipment. What ever use Germany may have made of the six months, on balance, it is the Allies who have gained."

Must Remain Firm

And as Prime Minister Chamberlain appropriately put it, Hitler has "missed the bus" in not taking the offensive before the Allied armies were able to complete their preparations to meet any big push which the fusher might have launched but didn't.

Having "missed the bus," Hitler and his colleagues appear to be living in a fool's paradise, fondly hoping that they may be extricated from their dilemma by a negotiated peace—an eventuality which is beyond all possibility, if the Allied leaders maintain the stand which they have stoutly held since the outbreak of hostilities. There is no reason to believe there will be any weakening of the position that Nazism must be rendered impotent before the Allies will lay down their arms. Indeed, any other decision would be an invitation for a repetition elsewhere of the rape of Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Until the routing and uprooting of Nazism has been consummated therefore, the people of this country must be content to continue their participation in the war with patience, determination and indomitable will, and in the meantime, take advantage of opportunities which will arise from time to time to prepare the scaffolding for the magnificent national structure which may and will be erected once peace has been restored.

OTTAWA HOUSE OPENS SESSIONS ON MAY 16

Ottawa.—Parliament will be opened at 1 p.m. M.S.T., May 16, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced, but, in keeping with tradition, members of the senate and house of commons will meet at 10 a.m. M.S.T., to enable the latter chamber to elect a new speaker.

This will be the first session of the 19th parliament since confederation with a new house of commons returned in the Dominion elections of March 26 and a number of new senators appointed to fill vacancies caused by death.

After every general election the new house of commons elects a speaker. Hon. Pierre F. Casgrain was speaker of the last house and may continue in that post, but must be re-elected.

In this connection, the prime minister said that any changes or appointments affecting parliament will be made only a few days before or on the eve of the opening. Mr. Casgrain has been widely mentioned for the cabinet vacancy created by the death last summer of Hon. Fernand Rinfret, secretary of state.

Sir Lyman P. Duff, chief justice of Canada and administrator of the government until the arrival in Canada in June of the new governor-general, the Earl of Athlone, will open parliament.

Mr. Mackenzie King will meet parliament with the greatest majority ever given a political party in the Canadian house of commons. He will have 178 straight Liberals and 53 independent Liberals and Liberal Progressive who customarily support the government, out of 245 members.

Balkans In Danger

100,000 German Troops Near The Hungarian Frontier
Bucharest.—Germany has notified southeastern European nations that any country moving to switch trade from the Reich to the Allies will be considered "unneutral," it was reported reliably in south-eastern European capitals.

A German news bulletin issued in the same capitals also stated the Nazis had reached a full understanding with the Danubian nations, particularly Roumania, that river shipping will be safeguarded with all means.

The Reich has demanded the right to send its gunboats down the river to protect transport of oil and wheat against "British sabotage". The German notification concerning a switch in trade was given weight by the reported presence of more than 100,000 German "lightning" troops near the Hungarian frontier, and nearly 200,000 more at Cracow, in conquered Poland.

In addition it was reported here, without confirmation, that Russia had concentrated troops at Odessa, 25 miles from Roumania's eastern border.

It was generally admitted the presence of Nazi gunboats on the Danube in their territorial waters would be at least a technical violation of the little country's neutrality, as well as a possible opening wedge for German land operations.

Legation Staffs Are Safe

London.—A Reuters news agency dispatch from Stockholm said that the British minister to Norway and all the staffs of the French and Polish legations have crossed the frontier into Sweden. The British minister was believed to be en route to Stockholm.

Offer Services Again

Toronto.—The Canadian volunteers for Finland, a force of 2,000 which was disbanded when a Russo-Finnish peace was announced, are offering their services to the Scandinavian countries through Finn Kaakstrom, commander of the Finnish war veterans of Toronto.

Reaches Safety

Croydon, England.—A 700-mile airplane journey was the fate of Krister Sundstrom, 2½, who came by air from Sweden to England to join his parents here. His father said the boy is "sister in London" than in Sweden.

Australia Determined

Sydney.—The "savagery" German invasion of Norway has strengthened Australia's determination to prove the war to a decision. Prime Minister Robert Menzies said. The press denounced the German invasion of Norway and Denmark.

Raid On Scaja Flow

Six Nazi Bombers Reported To Have Been Shot Down

London.—The Royal Air Force, fighting fierce air battles at home and over a far-flung "air front" in Scandinavia, was disclosed to have driven off a major Nazi raid on Scaja Flow, downing six Heinkel bombers.

Three others were believed so badly disabled it was considered doubtful they would reach their base.

Two Heinkel bombers were officially announced to have been shot down in Moray Firth during a Nazi attack upon a convoy.

Waves of German planes attacked strategic Scaja Flow north of Scotland. The raid was described by spectators as the "most murderous yet made" on the Orkney Islands.

Circling over the Orkney in large and small formations, the German bombers ran into heavy fire from anti-aircraft batteries as British pursuit planes went up to intercept the attackers.

A joint statement issued by the admiralty and the air and home security ministries said "it is certain that three enemy bombers were brought down by anti-aircraft fire and one by fighter aircraft" over Scaja Flow. It added that "it is probable that at least two more enemy bombers were brought down by fighters."

No Export Permits

Stop All Shipments From Canada To Baltic Countries

Ottawa.—The prime minister's office announced that no export permits were being issued from Canada to any Baltic or Scandinavian destination.

As a result of the German invasion of Denmark and Norway outstanding permits for export to Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have been revoked.

"Immediate steps are being taken to stop shipments covered by such licences from leaving Canada," the announcement said.

An announcement said all financial institutions in Canada had been asked to communicate with the custodian of alien property before making any payments from Danish or Norwegian accounts to interests in ships, sometimes in order to stop such payments falling into enemy hands.

Refugees From Europe

Winnipeg Man Regrets That Canada Is Not Admitting More

Vancouver, B.C.—Regret the Canadian government has not adopted a "definite" policy with regard to the admission of refugees from Europe, war areas was expressed in an interview by Ald. M. A. Gray of Winnipeg.

"It is most unfortunate that the government does not take advantage of the services of these European refugees," Ald. Gray, who is a member of the Winnipeg branch of the Canadian national refugee committee, said.

"If we were permitted to, we could establish a great number of them in Canada, and could guarantee that none of them would become public charges or interfere with the labor market."

Danish Shipping

Has Now Been Taken Under Protection Of British

Los Angeles.—The Danish consulate here said it had received a communication from the British consulate announcing that Danish shipping has been taken under British protection and that any Danish ships encountered on the high seas by British warships are to be sent to a British port.

"Any such vessels desiring to clear from an American port are to be advised to proceed to a British or Canadian port," the letter added. "The necessary steps to put this last arrangement into effect are being taken by the British authorities in this country."

Relief Airbases

Ottawa.—Two relief airbases will be established in conjunction with the main airbases for each of the 16 flying training schools under the British Commonwealth air training plan, the department of national defence announced.

Will Attend Convention

Montreal.—More than 500 delegates, representing 150,000 members of the Canadian Legion from Halifax to Vancouver, will attend the ninth biennial convention to be held here May 27 to 30.

Discussion Continues

Regarding Establishment Of Contraband Control Base On Canadian Coast

Ottawa.—Proposal that the British government establish a contraband control base on the Canadian Atlantic coast is still a subject of discussion, a government official said here.

This official was commenting on a report from Washington that Lord Lothian, British ambassador to the United States, with Lord Curzon, Canadian minister, and the under-secretary of state, Sumner Welles, had discussed establishment of a Canadian contraband control base.

There was nothing to be said at the moment on progress of the discussions which have extended over a considerable period between the governments of Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States, the official declared.

GERMAN FLEET SWEEPED FROM SEA IN NAVAL BATTLE

Stockholm, Sweden.—Hitler's Nazi navy was swept from the Skagerrak as Allied sea dogs smashed their way through turbulent sea and a great armada of the very dooms of stricken Oslo.

In the greatest sea battle of the Second World War, naval forces of the Allies brought destruction to the great fleet of German warships and troop-laden vessels. At least nine Nazi ships were sent to the bottom and other broken ships of the German navy limped away to neutral ports.

The battle of the Skagerrak was one of three sea battles along hundreds of miles of Norwegian coast and broken victims of the Allied onslaught dotted wild seas.

British and French ships, valiantly helped by long obsolete Norwegian ships, are believed to have destroyed at least 24 German ships.

A day of victory brought fresh courage to stricken Norway and King Haakon said his country would go on fighting the Nazi invader. From inland points came reports of bitter fighting between Norwegian and German forces.

Last word was that British warships were outside Oslo and were bombing the Nazi captors of the Norwegian capital.

British United Press reports from the scene of battle of Skagerrak said that four German cruisers and five heavily laden troopships had been sunk so far.

Several badly damaged Nazi troopships are said to have run for refuge within Swedish territorial waters. At the tiny Swedish islands off Gothenburg, fishing boats are bringing in grim loads of dead and wounded soldiers from the battle scene.

Eyewitnesses said the loss of life has been great. Many bodies of German soldiers and sailors are being washed up on the shores.

Residents of the Island of Hjelpe, off which the pit of battle is located, said that they have seen two ships, believed to have been Nazi transports, explode and disappear into the sea with amazing speed. Hundreds of heads bobbed in the water.

Service Held at Elsfeld

Lord Tweedsmuir Chose Place Where His Ashes Were Interred

Elsfeld, Oxfordshire, England.—Of the crest of a little hill in the graveyard of the tiny 12th century Elsfeld church the ashes of John Buchan, first Lord Tweedsmuir, were interred.

The place, chosen by the late governor-general of Canada himself, lies within the shadow of the worshipping place of the Buchans of Elsfeld manor.

A simple service, conducted by the vicar, Rev. W. M. Aste, was attended by immediate members of the family, including Lady Tweedsmuir, her three sons, the new Lord Tweedsmuir, Hon. William Buchan and his wife, and Hon. Alastair Buchan; her daughter, Hon. Mrs. Brian Fairfax-Lucy, and Mr. Fairfax-Lucy; and Honorable Mrs. Norman Grosvenor, Lady Tweedsmuir's mother.

Will Sell Planes

U.S. War Department Clears The Way For Deliveries

Washington.—The United States war department cleared the way for future, large-scale deliveries of American-made fighting planes to Britain and France by releasing for export three of the latest model pursuit craft.

Coincident with the spectacular new turn in the war, manufacturers were told they were free to negotiate foreign contracts for the Lockheed P-38, Bell P-39 and Curtiss P-40D. All are described as very fast planes designed especially to cope with bombers and fight off enemy pursuit craft.

Alld For Norway

Toronto.—Carl J. Frints, Norwegian vice-consul here, said 10,000 men in Toronto, many of them trained soldiers, are ready to volunteer to resist German aggression in Norway. "I have written the department of national defence at Ottawa regarding arrangements to train 1,500 here immediately, he stated.

Food Not Worrying Britain

Bacon And Butter Supplies Have Been Arranged For

London.—Lord Woolton, minister of food, assured Britons they "need have no fear that food supplies will be seriously interfered with" as a result of the Nazi invasion of Denmark and Norway.

The food minister in a statement said bacon is in ample supply and the butter situation is satisfactory.

Admitting the Nazi aggression alters the food situation in the British Isles considerably, Lord Woolton said:

"Since before the war the ministry of food has laid its plans in order that we could meet emergencies. So you need have no fear that food supplies will be seriously interfered with."

"If it were not for government control the present situation might be an emergency. As it is, however, it is nothing more than an appointment with the future which we had already put in our engagement diaries."

Britain is taking all the bacon and ham Canada can produce and make available for export during the war under an agreement announced last December 4.

Similarly, he has bargained for the entire exportable surplus of bacon and butter from Elre and butter from New Zealand.

Heavy consignments of bacon and dairy produce from Denmark and Sweden were landed recently and placed in reserve because the authorities foresaw a possible interruption of supplies.

Paris.—The Allies will carry the war in Scandinavia to the "bitter end from the northern tip to the British home coast" and in the future "not one ton of iron ore will quit Narvik for Germany," Premier Paul Reynaud told a cheering French senate.

The premier said that half the German fleet now was exposed to the British home fleet and part of the French fleet.

Economically and militarily he said Adolf Hitler will suffer from his invasions of Denmark and Norway because his Scandinavian conquests are blockaded and against his will he has been forced to disperse his forces and withdraw men and materials from the Siegfried line.

The premier said that the German cruiser Blücher, 10,000 tons, and the light cruiser Karlsruhe, 6,000 tons, had been sunk. He fixed Allied losses in the naval battle off Narvik as one British destroyer sunk and one beached.

He said that no French vessels were damaged.

"France takes full responsibility for its part in the Allied notes to Norway," he announced. "Allied mining of Norwegian waters," Reynaud said.

"Not one ton of iron ore will quit Narvik for Germany henceforth."

"Long before the Allies planted minefields Germany was preparing an invasion of Scandinavia. Germany previously had dispatched merchant ships soldiers disguised as civilians and seamen."

Reynaud reviewed events in the spread of the war to Scandinavia. "Allied action started (when minefields were laid) with the aim of terminating an intolerable situation—the supplying of iron ore to the enemy," he said.

"Norwegian neutrality privileges no longer existed because of repeated violations of Norwegian waters. Germany furthermore has violated the treaty of non-aggression in which she solemnly promised Denmark that there would be no recourse to force," he said. "There is nothing comparable to Germany's attacks on Scandinavia."

"On one hand there was an Allied blockade in operation. On the other hand, the total lack of respect for the pledged word of treaty in an Hitlerian act of brutality."

"His latest violation of international law is not surprising. It must be pointed out that the violation modifies the equilibrium of forces in Europe."

"Economically Germany no longer may receive supplies from abroad through Denmark and Norway because of the blockade. Militarily Hitler, who did not want to disperse his forces, now finds that he faces the necessity of withdrawing men and material from the Western Front for operations in Scandinavia."

NORWAY WILL NEVER SUBMIT TO GERMAN RULE

Stockholm.—Following is the text of Premier Johan Nygaardsvold's proclamation: affirming refusal of Norway to establish a German-controlled puppet government:

The German government demanded of the King the appointment of a government enjoying the confidence of Germany and named by the fuhrer. The King did not cede to this demand, the acceptance of which would have transformed Norway into a vassal of Germany.

No other government can rule in Norway except the government which has the confidence of the Norwegian people. The Nygaardsvold government, which has held the country together with the storming for five years, remains the only legal government.

It offered its resignation upon the German invasion of Norway, but the storming was unanimous in thinking that the cabinet had to remain in power.

The government now addresses the entire Norwegian people, asking for its assistance in efforts to maintain the legal administration of the country, the liberty, and independence of Norway.

Germany has committed against Norway an act of brutality of which history knows too many examples. The Germans invaded the country with bombers and other means of destruction, gravely injuring the rights of a small people desiring to live in peace.

The Norwegian government is certain that the whole civilized world condemns this act of violence and is certain that the Norwegian people are ready to put forth all their efforts to restore the liberty and independence suppressed by a foreign power.

The future of Norway appears perhaps at the moment in sombre colors and the invaders can certainly commit great ravages, but the government is certain that a new free future is in store for the country. It therefore exhorts the whole Norwegian people to guard the heritage of liberty of the country and to continue the struggle for liberty faithful to the great ideas which inspired progress in our country for centuries. Long live the fatherland! Long live free Norway!

Sea Epic

Crew Of British Destroyer Gurkha Man Guns As Vessel Sinks

London.—Survivors of the British destroyer Gurkha returned to a Scotland where it was the most hair-raising tales of the present war. Their story is this: With their ship slowly sinking beneath them, the crew remained at their battle stations four and a half hours until the sea was awash with the bodies.

The Gurkha had been hit by an aerial bomb during the sea and air battle off the Norwegian coast.

Although the water rose to above their knees, he gunners kept blasting away in our enemy.

Fourteen men lost their lives aboard the destroyer.

Also landed at a north Scottish port were 70 German prisoners taken during the battle in the Skagerrak. They were put ashore under heavy guard.

Turkish Government Makes Effort To Line Up Roumania, Greece And Yugoslavia

Istanbul.—Turkish officials said that there is a movement in Turkish government circles in favor of calling a conference of the Balkan states in which an effort would be made to line up Roumania, Greece and Yugoslavia on the side of the Allies. These three, with Turkey, make up this entente.

The officials said Germany's invasion of Scandinavia demonstrated the futility of small nations trying to be neutral and justified Turkey's position as "not neutral but merely non-belligerent."

Turkey has mutual assistance pacts with Great Britain and France.

POLISH PEOPLE OF COLEMAN FORWARD IMPORTANT RESOLUTION

Resolution is Approved to be Forwarded to Governmental Authorities as well as Representatives of Enemy Countries.

The protest meeting in the Polish hall on April the 7th was attended by about 250 people, at which the speakers were Miss Phyllis Kukursky, of Calgary, who recently returned from two years in Poland; Dr. Crawford Rose, H. T. Halliwell and Walter Chuchla, secretary of the Polish League, were also present. Joe Michalsky was chairman. A collection taken amounted to over $50, in aid of Polish relief.

The speakers voiced the protest of all peoples, irrespective of nationality, over the atrocities committed by the Germans against the Polish population, and the following resolution was passed by a standing vote:

Resolution passed at a joint public mass meeting held at the Polish hall, Coleman, Alberta, on Sunday, 7th April, 1940, in the presence of 250 persons.

1. That we brand before God and the civilized world, the horrifying crimes of the barbarian invaders of Poland. That we particularly brand mass shooting and deportation of the innocent population, murders of women and children, stealing and robbing of national and private goods, ejection of Poles from their homes, thus condemning them to the suffering of famine and cold, persecution of religion and suppression of the Polish language, deliberate destruction of culture, science and monuments.

2. That we pledge ourselves to make any sacrifice and effort in order to contribute to the victory of justice and democracy, the symbol of which should be the entire reconstruction of a strong Polish state. The frontiers of this state must be inviolable and lasting peace, and they must include all Polish territories stolen by Germany during the past centuries.

3. That we affirm to the Government of Canada our loyalty and confidence, and that the triumph of our just cause will be complete and will bring a better future to Poland.

4. That we send to the Polish Government of National Unity, and to the Polish Army in France, the expression of our spiritual and brotherly sentiments, as well as our confidence, that the triumph of our just cause will be complete and will bring a better future to Poland.

5. That we liberating Canadians of Polish extraction, raise our voice in protest against the excesses committed upon an innocent people by the forces of Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia, and hereby appeal to our fellow Canadians, and the entire world, to take full cognizance of the brutal injustices which are being perpetrated against the Polish nation, and to urge upon their governments to render all possible assistance to the unfortunate inhabitants of Poland, who are in the front line of defence of civilization.

6. Be it further resolved that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Prime Minister of Canada, the governments of Great Britain, France and Poland, as well as to the governments of neutral countries through their accredited representatives in Canada. Copies of this resolution to be forwarded also to the nearest diplomatic representatives of the aggressor nations heretofore referred to.

J. MICHALSKY, Chairman.
WALTER CHUCHLA, Secretary.

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

(T. B. Windsor)

Edmonton, April 15.—Independent members-elect to the Alberta legislature are meeting in Edmonton at the end of this week to lay their plans for co-operation among themselves outside and inside the legislature as members of His Majesty's loyal opposition.

Dr. P. M. Campbell, of Lethbridge, whose margin of 1,435 votes was the largest majority recorded anywhere in the province in the March 21st election, issued the call for the meeting.

It is expected that all 20 will attend the meeting, and that the only opposition member absent will be Lieut. J. H. Tremblay, who was elected as a Liberal with Independent support in Grouard. But it is hoped that Lieut. Tremblay, who is overseas now with the Edmonton Regiment, will return to Edmonton for the first session of the legislature if one is held this year.

He was the only one of four former Alberta legislators who won re-election after joining the army. Capt. H. K. Brown was beaten in seeking re-election for Pembina and Lieut. G. L. MacLachlan failed to get the Social Credit nomination again for Acadia-Coronation, while Lieut. Rene Pelletier, Social Credit M.P. for Peace River in the last house of commons, was beaten March 26th.

Lieut. Tremblay's margin was just four votes over J. A. Maurice, who had just resigned as provincial secretary of the Social Credit league. Mr. Maurice said he might "protest" the election, although the soldier-legislator was not even in Canada to contest it.

The final results in the provincial election gives the opposition three-eighths of the seats in the house (21 to the government's 36) although the Independents got well over half of the vote.

Less than 1,150 votes scattered over 10 rural constituencies made the difference between victory and defeat for the Aberhart government. That is, if a total of just 575 more people (the total vote in the province was 305,000) had voted for Independent candidates instead of Social Credit, the Social Credit party would have had 20 seats instead of 36, and the Independents would have had 31. In half of those 10 ridings, the Social Credit-ers won by less than 100 votes, and in the other five they won by less than 200. In the 1935 election, most Social Credit-ers won by majorities of more than 1,000 each, and many of them by more than 2,000.

One of the big questions facing the government now is what to do for defeated Social Credit candidates, chiefly those who were members of the last house.

But it is certain that if he is going to prevent a lot of disension within his party, Premier Aberhart must find jobs on the public payroll for numerous men and women.

Chief among them is Hon. Solon Low, who was beaten in Warner. The latest indication is that despite the lack of confidence shown in him by his own constituents, Mr. Low will continue to be provincial treasurer, without a seat in the legislature until a good safe one can be found for him, or until some seat is made vacant by death.

Orvis Kennedy, the right-hand man for Mr. Aberhart and Mr. Manning in the Edmonton Prophetic Bible conference, was beaten for re-election as M.P. for East Edmonton; but has been appointed secretary of the Social Credit League. Provincial Social Credit candidates are reported unable to see why Mr. Aberhart should look after federal casualties first.

The views of the rest of Canada toward Social Credit aid Mr. Aberhart were perhaps typified by an editorial, after the provincial election, in a newspaper published in the little farming town of Chesterville, in Eastern Canada (which cannot be charged with being under the heel of the big bad financial wolves).

"In watching Canada's war economy and stability and safety," said the Chesterville Record, "the federal government will have to watch two danger spots: 'Capanulism wherever it burrows underneath the country, and Social Credit in Alberta. . . . Aberhart, for all his promises, has done nothing but pass unconstitutional legislation purporting to lead to the Social Credit millennium. He knew the legislation to be unconstitutional when he passed it. The most important items have led to his being defeated in the courts of Alberta, defeated in the supreme court of Canada, defeated by the federal government, ment through disallowance, and defeated in the privy council of England."

"A demagogue can fool a lot of people and obtain votes, but the courts still stand as the ultimate safeguards of the people's rights. And any time in the future that Aberhart invades the constitutional rights of Canadian citizens, he undoubtedly will be held before the courts again, just as before."

"The defeat of Solon Low was significant, because he was the one who made the notorious refunding deal whereby a promoter could pick up Alberta bonds at 50 or 60 and turn them into the government for bonds at par."

Wife: "I bought two of the most gorgeous spring dresses today. Only one hundred dollars all told."

Local young people who believe in proving around until the wee hours of morning, are advocating a daylight saving scheme, in which they may sleep during the live hours of the day.

HITLER'S TEN YEAR PLAN OF CONQUEST

Recently Britain secured documentary evidence of Hitler's ten-year plan to conquer Europe. The plan started in 1937.

Hitler's ten-year time-table of systematic aggression was revealed by the ministry of information in map form. The original was discovered by Czechoslovak police in 1938 when they raided headquarters in Prague of Konrad Henlein, then Sudeten German leader.

Here was the time-table:
1938: Conquest of Austria and Czechoslovakia.
1939: Poland and Hungary.
1940: Rumania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria.

1941: Denmark, The Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland, the Ukraine, and Northern France.
1942: Norway, Sweden, Portugal, Great Britain.

A peculiar procession was noticed in Blairmore on a recent Saturday. Heading off were two cars carrying a wedding party, next came a doctor's car, next a nurse's car, and finally a hearse. Many walks of life were represented.

Twenty-eight years ago, Robert J. C. Stead, now visiting Alberta, expressed the opinion that "the Hudson Bay route would not be much of a factor in the disposal of our grain. The rail haul was too long and the season too short."

Vancouver's mayor believes that the city should sell gasoline as a means to increase its revenue. He suggests that gasoline be purchased from an American oil company at 19 to 21 cents. The profit accruing to the city would be approximately 8 cents, and the gasoline would retail at 27 to 29 cents.

Because he was of Danish birth, Mayor Wilson (Wilson), of Edmonton, tendered his resignation, giving as the reason that his native land was now practically enemy territory. His resignation is not likely to be accepted, pressure having been brought to bear upon Mr. Wilson to remain as mayor, in which position he has proven very efficient.

The development of the art of brewing as we have traced it since the Egypt of 500 B.C., through the period of the Greeks, Roman, Spaniards, Gauls and German, all have adopted beverages made from barley, we now come to early English history: William of Malmesbury informs us that in the Reign of Henry II, the monasteries were remarkable for the strength and purity of their ales, brewed from malt prepared by the monks with great skill and care.

No Substitute Yet

Wood Is Only Thing Found Suitable For Railroad Ties

In this ersatz world, when a man's necktie may once have been a spruce tree; his pipe stem, formaldehyde crossed with phenol, and his shirt buttons once a pall of milk, had the good old reliable railroad crosstie!

For a solid century inventors tried for a substitute. They made ties of everything from compressed paper to glass, but in the 20th century the Twentieth Century still runs on wood.

Probably there is no patent sage sadder than that of the crosstie substitute, except the perpetual-motion file, at the Patent Office. There are 2,500 patented crossties there that never carried a rail on a real railroad.—Chicago News.

Efficient Crop Production

Providing Favorable Conditions For Maximum Yields

Broadly speaking, there are two ways of increasing the efficiency of crop production. One involves the development and distribution of improved varieties by plant breeders, and the other is concerned with providing favorable conditions under which maximum yields of best quality products may be secured. Why is it that the first way is so popular, and the second so sadly neglected? Nothing is easier than to "sell" a new variety of wheat to growers; but the adoption of methods of production necessary to the best immediate results and for the permanent benefit of the land is a much slower process.—Seedtime and Harvest.

Education For The Blind

New Photographic Course Is Now Made Available

The initial part of a new photographic course made available to a group of blind students at the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind, as described by Paul Mitchell, assistant principal of the institute, "consists of studying light by comparing it to heat and sound waves. A photo-electric cell is connected to a sound mechanism, and each student passes his hand through the light beam playing on the cell. This operates the sound mechanism and the result of his action is heard by the student."

Maid And Gardener On Kipling's Estate Have Home For Life

The privilege of living in a historic home is the legacy Mrs. Rudyard Kipling has left to the maid who shielded her for more than 12 years from crowds of curious sight-seers. Under the terms of her will, the estate of Balasana, near Burwash (Sussex), becomes a national memorial to the poet of Empire administered by the National Trust. His widow continued to live there until her death last December, aged 73. The only condition imposed upon the National Trust is that Mr. and Mrs. Charles Isted should be allowed to go on living in Oak Tree Cottage at a rental of 7s. a week. Mrs. Isted was Mrs. Kipling's maid, and Mr. Isted was a gardener on the estate until a year ago. Mr. and Mrs. Isted will be the only couple in England with the right to live on land officially designated as a place of historic interest.

Aerial Color Cameras

May Make Art Of Camouflage In War A Doubtful Defence

The wide-vision eyes of aerial color cameras may prove to be one of the most effective weapons of warfare yet invented. Color photography makes the art of camouflage a doubtful defence, officials of the army air corps said at Washington, because it makes visible a range of colors which cannot be distinguished by the human eye or in ordinary black-and-white photography.

Gun emplacements, troops, supply trains and trenches which were carefully concealed by nets, branches and colored cloth snap into sharp relief on a color photograph. Test color pictures made by the United States Air Corps brought out camouflaged buildings and other details of the landscape, which were invisible on black-and-white pictures.

Gardening

No Hurry

The average amateur starts operations days or sometimes weeks too soon and stops long before satisfactory gardening can continue. With the general run of vegetables and flowers there is no hurry in getting things in while there is still danger of serious frost. One setback from a cold day or two completely offsets the early start and may, indeed, mean replanting the whole garden. This caution of season does not apply to very hardy vegetables or flowers or to grass seed. These should be sown just as soon as ground is fit to work.

Give Them Room

Spacing is important as even the enthusiast does not care to spend much time kneeling and thinning. Labor can be saved by properly spacing the seed as planted. Corn, beans, peas and similar plants with big seeds can easily be sown at the distances advocated on the packet. With tiny seeded lettuce or alyssum, however, it is practically impossible to space by hand but if the seed is first mixed with a little sand and the whole sown carefully, plants will be spread out.

Good Guides

Seed catalogues put out by the large firms contain a mass of information and a mere mention of the many flowers and vegetables available and recommended in Canada. They specify important points such as time of planting, resistance or lack of resistance to frost, height, habit of growth, blooming, whether cased, and also the suitability of the flower for cutting purposes. All these points must be taken into consideration in planning a real garden.

For The Overworked

There are flower gardens that sit almost any situation. For those people who have neither the time nor inclination there are plants of flowers that thrive on neglect. A little digging of the ground in late spring is all that is required. Such things as alyssum, dwarf marigolds, portulaca and California poppies are ideal. These flowers almost seed themselves, crowd out weeds, do well in any location, but prefer sun. These will Once started they will look after themselves.

Snow And Moisture

Value In Increasing Soil Moisture Said To Be Over Estimated

Winter snowfalls in Alberta are usually hailed with satisfaction because people think the soil moisture is increased thereby. Investigations conducted by two able technical agriculturists at the Dominion Experimental Station at Swift Current, Saskatchewan, over a number of years, lead to the conclusion, however, that the value of snow in augmenting the available soil moisture has been over-estimated. These two men were the late S. Barnes and E. S. Hopkins. Their observations were that the water from melting snow on farmland usually runs off into sloughs and pot-holes or is evaporated into the air. Snow remains on the surface of the ground as long as the temperature of both remains below the freezing point. Moisture can only be absorbed by the soil when this is in an unfrozen condition. By the time the soil thaws out the snow has disappeared.—The Budget.

MICAH'S VISION OF PEACE

Golden text: And they shall beat their swords into plowshares; and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Micah 4:3.

Lesson: Micah.

Devotional reading: Isaiah 11:6-10.

Explanations and Comments

Micah's Vision of a World at Peace, Micah 4:3-5. This passage from the Book of Micah differs only slightly from that of Isaiah 2:2-4. Did one prophet quote from the other, and if so, which was the original writer, or did both prophets quote some well-known prophecy? Who shall say? In the latter days it shall come to pass, thus the prophecy begins. "The latter days" is an expression for "future time" and "the use in prophetic books makes the expression practically equivalent to 'messianic times'." In a far-distant time the prophet beholds his nation as a leader in the world's life. The mountain of Jehovah's house, Mount Moriah, which the temple was built on the whole standing for Jerusalem, shall be established on the top of the mountain, and it shall be exalted above the hills. Dr. Eiselein takes the words figuratively as meaning that the power of Jehovah will become so great that it will eclipse that of all other deities. And peoples shall flow into the temple which will come when other peoples will acknowledge the supremacy of Israel and Israel's God, and will say, "Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, and to the house of the God of Jacob," the seat of God's universal dominion, "and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths."

God's law will dominate the world. The result of God's universal supremacy will be that he will arbitrate among the great nations. "As that time all difficult cases in Israelite litigation were brought to the priests as the court of last resort and to Jehovah as the Supreme Judge, so in the Messianic Age the nations of the world will submit their difficult cases abovest, according to the law of the Supreme Judge, without question his righteous decision."

Therefore they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks, for in that glorious future nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. The Oriental plowshare was only a small sword bent into a shallow curve, and in shape, and could well have been made out of a sword. Swords were used as tools out of use, and to be superseded to-day by immensely deadlier weapons for wholesale destruction.

His Favorite Place

One summer evening, when Thomas A. Edison returned home from his work, his wife said, "You have worked long enough tonight. You must go to bed now." "But where will I go," he asked. "Decide the place you would rather be than anywhere else on earth, and go there," was the answer.

"Very well," promised Mr. Edison. "I will go to-morrow."

The next morning he returned to his laboratory.

TOPICS OF VITAL INTEREST

By Dr. J. W. S. McCULLOUGH

WAR-TIME HEALTH SERVICE

There must be no slackening of effort in Canada's health services during war-time if the Dominion is to make her best contribution toward winning the war, warned Dr. Gordon Bates, General Director of the Health League of Canada, in a statement issued recently. He was commenting on a recent report of health conditions in Germany.

Maintenance of the home front, keeping up important health services, and raising the health standards of the Canadian people are essential factors in the winning of the war, Dr. Bates declared.

He called attention to recent official statistics concerning health conditions in Germany, where, due to curtailment of health services, and lack of most leading doctors and health authorities, an astonishing deterioration of health is now evident. The statistics are published in a little book "Hell Hunger" written by Dr. Martin Gumpert, former head of the City Clinic in Berlin, now a refugee in New York.

"There are 700,000 German workers constantly out of action because of sickness," Dr. Gumpert reports. "Eighty thousand more persons died annually in Hitler Germany than in pre-Hitler Germany. The proportion of young men fit for the army dropped from 75 per cent. in 1935 to 55 per cent. in 1938. Reasons for the German debility are: lack of food, lack of rest, lack of medical care, spending money for munitions instead of health services."

"Canada could quite easily make Germany's mistake and cut down its health services," Dr. Bates pointed out. "Such a move would be fatal. It would do more than anything I know to help lose the war. The best of a nation in peace-time is important, but in war-time it is doubly vital. Municipalities and provinces could be urged to make certain that there be no let-up in measures to improve health conditions in Canada."

Faces Difficult Problem

International Ice Patrol Missing Operation of Canada This Year

The International Ice Patrol, which safeguards North Atlantic shipping from icebergs, is facing this spring and summer its most difficult problem since the service was started.

In the past the Naval Hydrographic Office has received through the co-operation of the Canadian Government and by direct radio communications from trans-Atlantic vessels, prompt information of all ice areas. This year Halifax is unavailable for such service, so the vessels will use Boston and New York as bases, greatly increasing the distance between bases and the ice fields.

The General Greene, one of the coast guard cutters assigned to the patrol service this year, will perform oceanographic services temporarily at St. John's, Newfoundland.

"Have you—?" She did not finish the question.

"A friend—yes. A very dear friend he was, many years ago, but the poor fellow couldn't go straight. I half promised to visit him, but I dropped the experience."

Mr. Harlow had no friend in any prison.

She looked at him thoughtfully.

"It isn't really so dreadful. I've been there before," he said, without the slightest embarrassment. "My uncle is there."

"Really?" His voice had just the right quantity of sympathy and understanding.

"This is my second visit in four years. I hate it, of course, and I'll be glad when it's over. It is usually rather—trying."

They were pacing slowly toward the hotel now.

"Naturally it is very dreadful for you. You feel so sorry for the poor fellows—"

She was smiling; he was almost shocked.

Business Only

"That doesn't distress me very much. I suppose it's a brutal thing to say, but it doesn't. There is no—"

She hesitated. "There is no affection between my uncle and myself, but I'm only relating and look after his affairs"—again, she seemed at a loss as to how she would explain—"and whatever money he has, and he's rather difficult to please."

Mr. Harlow was intensely interested; this was an aspect of the visit which he could not have imagined.

"It would be dreadful if I liked him, or he was fond of me," she went on, stopping at the foot of the hotel steps. "As it is, we have a business talk and that is all."

With a friendly nod she passed into the hotel ahead of him. Mr. Harlow stood for a long time in the doorway looking at nothing, his mind very busy, and then he stroiled back to his cooling coffee and presently fell into a discussion about the weather and the crops with the nervous little man who awaited his coming.

They were quite alone now. The motor parties had vanished in noisy confusion; the old gentleman and the stout old lady were leaving the hotel on a walking excursion as he had come in.

"Everything all right, Ellenbury?"

"Yes, Mr. Harlow," said the little man eagerly. "Everything is in perfect shape and trim. I have settled the action that the French underwriters were bringing against the Rata Company, and—"

Suddenly he was stricken to silence. Following the direction of his staring eyes, Mr. Harlow also looked out of the window.

Eight convicts were walking down the street in the direction of the railway station; but, unlike the men he had seen that morning, these were handcuffed to a bright steel chain which threaded the little procession. Mr. Harlow looked and pointed.

"Not a very pleasant nor an agreeable sight, he said. In his oracular moments his voice was very rich and pleasant. "Yet one, I think, to which the callous people of Princeton are quite accustomed. These men are being transferred to another prison, I imagine. Do you ever realize what your feelings would be if you were, say, the leader of that gang, chained like a wild beast—"

"For God's sake, stop!" said the little man hoarsely. "Don't talk about it, don't talk about it!" His trembling hands covered his eyes.

"I had a horror of coming here," he said, in a voice that was scarcely audible. "I've never been before. . . . The car passed that terrible archway and I nearly fainted!"

"Mr. Harlow, one eye on the door, smiled indulgently.

"You have nothing to fear, my dear Ellenbury," he said, in a paternal voice. "I have in a sense conducted your felony. In a sense," he emphasized carefully. "Whether or Judge would take the same view, I do not know. You understand the law better than I. This much is certain: you are free, your debts are paid, the money you stole from your clients has been made good, and you have, I think, an income which I shall we say, satisfactory."

The little man nodded and swallowed something. He was white to the lips, and when he tried to lift a glass of water his hand shook as he had to put it down again.

"I'm very grateful," he said. "Very—very grateful. . . . I'm sorry—it was rather upsetting."

"Naturally," murmured Mr. Harlow.

He took a notebook from his pocket, opened it with the greatest deliberation, and wrote for five minutes, the little lawyer watching him. When he had finished he tore out the sheet and passed it across the table.

"I want to know all about this man Arthur Ingle," he said. "I'm a lawyer, and where he lives in London or elsewhere, his means, and especially his grudge against life. I don't know what it is, but I rather suspect that it is a pretty big one. I should also like to know where his niece is employed. Her name you will find on the paper, with a query mark attached. I want to know who are her friends, what are her amusements, and if her financial position is very important."

Mr. Carlton

"I understand," Ellenbury put the paper carefully in a worn pocket-book. And then, with one of his habitual starts: "I had forgotten one thing, Mr. Harlow," he said. "On Monday last I had a visit at my office in Lincoln's Inn Fields from the police."

He said the last two words apologetically as though he were in some way responsible for the character of his caller. Mr. Harlow turned his pale eyes upon his companion and made a long scrutiny of his face before he asked:

"In what connection?"

"I don't know exactly," said Ellenbury. "One eye on the door of reproducing at a second's notice all the emotions he described. "It was rather puzzling. He screwed up his face into an expression of bewilderment. "You see, Mr. Carlton did not come to any point."

"Carlton?" demanded Harlow, quickly for him. "That's the man at the Foreign Office, isn't it?"

Ellenbury nodded.

"Well?"

"It was about the rubber fire. You remember the fire at the United International factory? He wanted to know if Rata had any insurance on the stock there, and, of course, I told him that so far as I know, we hadn't."

"Don't say 'we,'" said Mr. Harlow gently. "Say the Rata syndicate hadn't. You're a lawyer acting for unadvised principals. Well?"

"That was all," said Ellenbury. "He was very vague."

"He always is vague," interrupted Harlow with a faint smile, "and here you see, Mr. Carlton—remember that, Ellenbury, Sub-inspector James Carlton is the most unscrupulous man that Scotland Yard has ever employed. Some day he will be irretrievably ruined or irretrievably promoted. I have a great admiration for him. I know of no man in the world-rate higher in point of intelligence, accuracy, and—unscrupulousness! He has a theory which is both admirable and baffling. Which means that he has the right theory. For rectitude is the most baffling of all human qualities, because, you never know, if a man is doing right, what he will do next. I think that is almost an epigram, Ellenbury; you had best jot it down, so that if ever you are called upon to write my biography you may have material to lighten its pages." He looked at his watch. "I shall be at Park Lane at 11 o'clock on Friday night, and I can give you ten minutes," he said.

The Art of Happiness

Ellenbury twiddled his fingers unhappily.

"Isn't there a risk—to you, I mean?" he blurted. "Perhaps I'm stupid, but I can't see why you do—"

"Well, why you take chances with all your money."

Mr. Harlow leaned back in the cushioned seat, amusement faintly visible in his pale eyes.

"If you had millions what would you do? Retire, of course. Build or buy a beautiful house—and then?"

"I don't know," said the other man vaguely. "One could travel. . . ."

"The English people have two ideas of happiness: one comes from travel, one from staying still. Traveling or rustling! I might marry but I don't wish to marry. I might have a great stable of race horses, but I detest racing. I might yacht—I suppose I would. I might have a thrill! I do! The art of living is that of victory. Make a note of that. Where is happiness in cards, horses, golf, women—anything you like? I'll tell you: in beating the best man to it. That's an Americanism. Where is the joy of mountain climbing, of exploration, of scientific discovery? To do better than somebody else—to go farther, to put your foot on the head of the next best."

He blew a cloud of smoke through the open window and waited until the breeze had torn the misty gossamer into shreds and nothingness.

"When you're a millionaire you either get inside yourself and be a beast, or get outside of yourself and be a nuisance to your fellows. If you're a Napoleon you will play the game of power, if you're a Napoleon you'll play for knowledge—stakes hardly matter; it's the game that counts. Accomplishment has its thrill, whether it is hitting a golf ball, or the next fellow, or the strewing the plains of Flanders with the bodies of your enemies. My thrill is harder to get than most people's."

"I'm a millionaire. Sterling and dollars are my soldiers—I am entitled to frame my own rules of war; conduct my forays in my own way. Don't ask any further questions!"

He waved his hand toward the door and Mr. Ellenbury was dismissed, and shortly afterward his hired car rattled loudly up the hill and past the gates of the jail. Mr. Ellenbury studiously turned his face in the opposite direction.

May Replace Skin-Grafting

Discover New Method For Rapid Healing Of Wounds

A substance which may enable war wounds to heal more quickly is the result of an experiment being conducted at the Strangeways Research Laboratory, Cambridge.

It is called epicutan, and its discoverer, Dr. Albert Fisher, is director of the Carlsberg Biological Institute, of Copenhagen.

For some years there has been knowledge of growth promoting substance obtainable from 10-day-old chick embryo. Its instability and the technical difficulties in extracting it have been obstacles to its use in surgery, but it would seem that Dr. Fisher has discovered a means of producing the substance as a clean, stable powder which can be absorbed in solution.

It is suggested that the use of this has shown cases where wounds have healed in one-third of the usual time. It may to some extent replace skin-grafting.

Relief Of The Plague

Piece Of Paper That Was Recovered After 275 Years

Workmen pulling down an old inn at Evesham recently found an almost perfect piece of paper which proved to be a plague pass issued during the Great Plague of London. A week or so ago it was given to the Guildhall.

That pass was issued in July, 1665. The plague in 1665 was climbing swiftly to the fearful peak it reached in September. The plague doctors were collecting over 5,000 bodies a week, and King Charles and the Court fled to the country. So a servant girl called Mary Walker was in good company when she, too, took fright. Her master was George Bosket, and she worked in the parish of St. Andrew Undershaft, in the heart of the city.

She went to the church wardens, and gave her a pass, or certificate of health, to get away from London. It said simply that, by God's blessing, Mary herself and her master's whole family, and all the neighbors about them had through the Summer been free from the plague.

Armed with this written paper, Mary Walker got back to her native Evesham, in Worcestershire. She there got work at an old half-timbered inn which showed the sign of the Cross Keys.

The pass had value, should she need to move away again. She must have placed it for safekeeping in a chink of the rafters of the attic room she slept in. The plague never returned. No doubt the pass was forgotten. The ancient inn has been pulled down for rebuilding, and in the demolition Mary Walker's "Pass for the Plague" was drawn out from the timbers in which it had lain concealed for 275 years—London Listener.

Our New Governor-General

Third Close Relative Of Reigning Sovereign To Hold Office

The Earl of Athlone will be the sixteenth Governor-General of Canada since Confederation, the third close relative of a reigning sovereign to hold the office, and the second Governor-General to take office with Canada at war.

His appointment recalls the fact that at the outbreak of the last war an uncle of the then reigning sovereign, George V., held the position. He was His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, a son of Queen Victoria.

The new Governor-General is also an uncle of the present King, but is not entitled to the style "His Royal Highness," as he is a brother of Queen Mary and a member of the Royal family only by marriage. As a son of the Duke of Teck he was styled "Highness" and "Prince" until 1917, when he relinquished those honors on receiving his earldom.

Back in Victorian times Rideau Hall had a Royal occupant when the Marquess of Lorne was Governor-General. His wife, Princess Louise, was a daughter of Queen Victoria.

Reason For Purchases

Queen Mary Changes Pictures In Her Rooms Quite Frequently

Queen Mary has for years been a regular patron of the arts, and a London writer tells an interesting story of her frequent purchases of pictures. It is understood she likes to have the pictures changed frequently in the rooms she uses most. This, she considers, gives them an air of freshness that is actually stimulating to health. Many of her pictures are often used later as gifts to personal friends. Numbers of them can be found in each of the Royal residences.

Powdered Grass

Chemists Claim Dried Grass Contains More Vitamins Than Fruit Or Vegetables

Man can eat grass and get more vitamins from it than from all the other plants and fruits put together. Twelve pounds, dried, of the stuff that flies from the lawn mower contains more vitamins than 340 pounds of fruit and vegetables—more fruits and vegetables than the average person eats in a year.

This scientific discovery, along with methods to make grass powder palatable in pancakes, breakfast foods, bread, cookies, desserts and candy, was made public by the American Chemical Society, which began a five-day meeting with scientists have discovered that quick drying preserves most of the vitamin content.

The man-eats-grass report came from W. R. Graham, G. O. Lohler and C. F. Schnable of Kansas City, Mo., who contend that the grass powder can be made cheaply enough to be put in common foods with little expense.

Raw grass is not palatable and when sun-dried it loses vitamins. But in recent years agricultural scientists have discovered that quick drying preserves most of the vitamin content.

Trying this for a human food, the Kansas City chemists dried the grass in a vacuum high temperature. Then they powdered it and found that it is sealed in containers filled with nitrogen, the vitamins last unimpaired for about two years.

The report said powdered grass contains 2,500 international units of vitamin as against from 1,000 up to 12,000 units for equal quantities of all fruits and vegetables.

Urged To Avoid Waste

British Minister Of Food Shows How Small Things Count Up

The British Minister of Food Lord Woolton urged small consumers to avoid waste, emphasizing that one slice of bread wasted daily by each consumer would amount to 30 shiploads of wheat in a year.

Woolton inaugurated a national food campaign in a speech and appealed to women to organize a "kitchen front."

He said that the peace-time recipe of one spoonful of tea per person and one for the pot, be changed to one for each person and none for the pot. He said that if this method was practiced, it would save 60 shiploads of tea per year.

Had Bull Or Trade

Canada and the United States are the principal suppliers of onions to Bermuda, the heaviest trade going to whichever of the two countries offers the lowest price. In recent years, Canada has done the bulk of the trade. From 1933 to 1937, the annual average of Canadian onions imported into Bermuda was approximately 250,000 bushels.

The Alberta government is proposing to spend a lot of money of roads this summer. This money is freely provided by the people, all expecting that it will be well spent... but such temporary surfacing as has been done on heavy traffic highways like from Okotoks to Calgary has been pretty much a waste of good money.
